

This is a comprehensive genealogical and historical record for the Leijer family, centered on the Leijer family tree and the Leijer family in Leiden. The document is organized into several main sections:

- Family Tree: A large, multi-generational tree starting with the Leijer family in Leiden, showing marriages, births, and deaths. Key figures include Willem Leijer (1792-1868) and Anna Leijer (1792-1868). The tree branches out to show descendants in various locations, including Leiden, Rotterdam, and other parts of the Netherlands.
- Historical Documents: Numerous handwritten letters and official records are included, providing context for the family's history. These include letters from Willem Leijer to his children and other family members, as well as official records from the Leiden city archives.
- Gravestones and Burial Records: Detailed information about the family's graves in the Leiden cemetery, including photos of the stones and their inscriptions. Key graves include those of Willem Leijer and Anna Leijer, and their children and grandchildren.
- Biographical Notes: Short biographies and family stories are provided for several key individuals, such as Willem Leijer, Anna Leijer, and their children. These notes often include details about their lives, careers, and family relationships.
- Maps and Locations: A map of Leiden is included, showing the locations of the family's homes and graves. The map is annotated with names and addresses, providing a visual context for the family's history in the city.
- Genealogical Research Notes: Various notes and annotations are scattered throughout the document, providing additional information and references for the family's history. These notes often include dates, names, and locations, and are often written in a smaller font.

The document is a rich and detailed record of the Leijer family's history, providing a comprehensive view of their lives and the family's roots in Leiden. The use of multiple languages and the inclusion of historical documents and photos make it a valuable resource for genealogical research and family history.
